ASKS THAT ARBUCKLE FILMS BE BANNED

Will H. Hays, director of the National Association of Picture Producers and Distributors, was called upon to prevent exhibition of motion pictures featuring Roscoe (Fatty) Arbuckle by the Lord's Day Alliance of New York in a letter made public recently.

Calling Arbuckle's acquittal on a charge of manslaughter and the jury's statement in his behalf a "whitewash," the letter addressed to Mr. Hays said:

"We respectfully urge upon you that you use your authority to intervene and prevent the outrage to the moral sensibilities of the citizens of this country threatened in the proposal again to exhibit any Arbuckle films."

FORTY YEARS IN THE NEWSPEER BUSINESS

(Courier-Journal)
When one picks up a handsome pamphlet bearing the title, "A Humiliating Confession," he is puzzled by that title; for the pamphlet tells the story of Urey Woodson's Messenger, published and edited by him at Owensboro for forty years. Newspaper men knew there is nothing humiliating in that story, and only a search reveals what humiliation Mr. Woodson can confess.

"It is a humiliating confession," he says, "that, after more than forty years' endeavor to produce one of the best small dailies in the country, we have sadly fallen behind in caring for our own interests; we have failed to establish advertising rates for the Messenger that are fair to a newspaper of its circulation and merit."

If Urey Woodson has failed in that then that must be his one failure. For he has certainly succeeded in producing "one of the best small dailies in the country." He has succeeded in making it a power in its territory. He has succeeded in making it so prosperous that it is housed in a modern newspaper plant and enables its proprietor to divert some of his versatile talents to other lines of activity, both in business and politics. And his success in these various fields has been such as to extend his reputation for success, as journalist and politician, far beyond the limits of his own State.

MORE MONEY NOT THE NEED

Many persons, some of them posing as teachers of economics of a certain kind, advocated an increase in the circulating medium as the solution of the trade difficulties of the times. Others hold that such increase would be futile, if not dangerous, and they point to Europe as an example of inflated currency.

It seems strange that any person who has followed the experience of most European countries since the war will still adhere to the idea that money is something that requires only a government stamp to make it valuable. Germany, Russia, Poland and some other countries of Europe know that this can not be done.

There is enough money in the United States to finance all the manufacturing and business enterprises for which there is a legitimate demand in the production of goods. This demand can not be created by the issue of large quantities of currency, but by the inclination to buy.

It is methods, not money, which the various interests of the United States need. There must be more economical distribution of manufactured and agricultural products, and there must be adjustments in other lines that will make conditions more normal. When that is done, there will be money for all genuine needs of the nation, but if more is needed the government need not resort to fiat issues of currency.

WIDE INTEREST IN NEW BURLEY PLAN

Tobacco growers from all over the United States are interested in the success of the Burley Tobacco Growers' Co-operative Association, according to inquiries received from every tobacco growing State in the Union and to the number of personal investigations being made by tobacco men from the various States.

L. C. Foster, of Madison, Wis., Deputy Commissioner of the Bureau of Markets, is in Lexington to study the plan of the burley association. Mr. Foster is one of the leaders in a movement in Wisconsin to organize the tobacco growers along the lines of the Kentucky association and has come here, as he expresses it, "to get some 'thunder' for the membership campaign" which he plans to start within a few weeks.

Mr. Foster said Wisconsin grows, annually, about 60,000,000 pounds of cigar type tobacco. He said the 1920 crop sold at an average of 40 cents a pound. The 1921 crop sold last winter for less than 7 cents a pound. As a consequence, he said, the Wisconsin growers are facing conditions similar to those that existed in Kentucky one year ago, and the growers realize they must organize for self-protection.

Mr. Foster, who has been in conference with officials of the association, said he was greatly impressed by the wonderful progress the organization has made in so short a time, and he assured these men that, within a few months, Wisconsin would join hands with Kentucky, Ohio, Indiana, Virginia, the Carolinas and other States that have adopted the co-operative plan of marketing tobacco.

Hugh West, of Hopkinsville, Ky., also visited the association's offices. Mr. West who is from the dark tobacco district, and one of the prime movers in the organization work there, reports that the prospects for a co-operative in Western Kentucky and Tennessee are very encouraging.

Plans are being formulated for beginning within a few weeks another intensive campaign for members. Every county already organized will be canvassed, but special effort will be made to sign up the small percentage of burley growers still outside.

Mr. Stone predicts that in the near future the Burley Association will have control of practically the entire burley tobacco production.

The field service division reported the receipt, during the week, of 115 contracts, representing about 300,000 pounds. Of these thirty were received from Bracken county, thirteen from Rockcastle and ten Boone, Kentucky, and nineteen from Indiana.

GENOA PROMISES MUCH

The prompt manner in which differences of opinion between the various delegates to the Genoa conference have been brought to the front, disclosing the extent of the chasms which must be bridged if comity and understanding is to be restored among the nations of Europe, is a good omen. This in itself is a step forward and paves the way for a frank exchange of views.

In view of some recent history, the French government hardly can be blamed for being unwilling to run the risk of losing the fruits of the treaty of Versailles until some other means of putting the prostrate nations on their feet have been considered. One of the great hopes for the success of the meeting lies in the British premier's leadership. No other statesman of the present is so well fitted for the difficult task he faces.

American public sentiment approves the admission of the Germans to the conference, whatever its opinion of the propriety of admitting the Bolsheviks as representatives of the Russian people. The objection of the French and Belgians to the inclusion of their former foes in the membership of the principal committee is easily understood, but it is gratifying that they listened to the British premier's counsel and changed their attitude.

PUBLIC OPTION

"There may have been a time when some public utilities turned their backs of public opinion but that time has certainly passed" said the operator of a large public utility following the meeting of the American Electric Railway Association at Indianapolis last month.

At this meeting, one of the foremost men in the public utility business, Samuel Insull, President of the Commonwealth Edison Company of Chicago, made a speech on the subject of "Public Relations—the most important asset for a utility." Mr. Insull very aptly hit the nail on the head when he said:

"Our trouble lies mainly in the fact that for a great many years we lacked understanding of the economics of our business ourselves and that at this time a knowledge of the true economics is confined to a few of the people engaged in those businesses. What we need worse than anything else is to sell our business to our own officials and employees and then sell it to the public."

London is reported to be prepared to pay the interest on its war debt to the United States.

Mr. Jenkins Took a Cracked Club To Tame Lions

The exhibition ended rather badly. It very nearly was a big day for the lions and a sad day for Mr. Jenkins—all for want of proper care in getting ready.

Many a man who has business to do and a living to make and a job to fill is as careless how he feeds his body as Mr. Jenkins was in picking out a club.
